

You will find this response unsatisfactory but time has got away from me during the campaign period and I have not had the chance to do the research before the election, so will not be giving you answers before Thursday.

However you cast your vote is ultimately between you and the ballot box and I would not answer questions of this complexity one way or another in a bid to win votes.

I would genuinely be interested in finding out more about these issues if elected, as I can see they are strategically relevant to elected representatives as well as passionately held beliefs of many individuals, and we can perhaps discuss further once the election is behind us.