

Paul Latham, UKIP – Keighley & Ikley

You have raised 5 points with me regarding the conflict between the Palestinians, Israel and human rights. This conflict has been on-going ever since the state of Israel was first declared by David Ben-Gurion, at midnight on 14th May, 1948.

I remain strictly neutral and non-aligned on this subject. Although I want a preaceful, secure settlement for both sides, whereby human rights are given priority.

I have members of my own family who were brought up under Islam, so I share your concerns about having this long-term issue amicably resolved.

The policy of my party is for parliamentary candidates not to participate in answering either questionnaires or pledges during this general election period, on any subject.

Many of the concerns you list are before the United Nations and the Security Council. These remain unresolved at present.
